Grabbing a coldie in a volcano!

Kiwi sits by lava in his jandals, roasts a marshmallow and drinks a stubbie. He should be their next prime minister

Who drinks beer with a marshmallow? Our cuddy bros across the ditch, that's who. Simon Turner sat by a lava lake in Vanuatu's

Indian policeman puts on a Republic
Day show

 January 26 isn't just an occasion to eat stacks of meat and drink your own body weight in piss while complaining that the Triple J Hottest 100 countdown isn't as good as it used to be. It's also when India celebrates Republic Day, which sees military marches and lavishly decorated floats and dancers, like Anzac Day combined with Mardi Gras. This policeman had a breakthrough moment in Jammu, northern India.

WIN A DATE WITH TWO ZOO MODELS!

COVER GIRLS DAVINA RANKIN AND CHLOE PATTERSON ARE ON THE LOOKOUT FOR A GOOD MAN... AND YOU COULD BE THE ANSWER

BE
YOU!

DAVINA

CHLOE

CHLOE &
DAVINA

G'day, ladies. What have you been up to since we saw you last?

CHLOE: I'm on holidays at the moment so I've just been living at the beach, pretty much! I've been going out heaps, too, as it's party season.

DAVINA: Apart from working my butt off and travelling, I am now SINGLE! First time in god knows how long, too, but I'm adjusting quite well.

We hear you haven't had much luck finding guys to go out with. How the hell does that happen to two glamour models?

CHLOE: I'm not sure! Maybe we just attract the wrong types of guys. Maybe they're a bit nervous to come up and talk to us or maybe we give off the wrong vibe!

DAVINA: I'm not too sure if it's my taste in men or the city I'm living in, but most of the guys I meet are either emotionally damaged, stage-five clingers, ridiculously good-looking with shithouse personalities, or vice versa. I guess I'm still trying to find "my type" [laughs].

Where's the best place to take you on a first date?

CHLOE: I think somewhere where you're doing something fun so you don't have awkward silent moments where you're just looking at each other across from the table. Just doing something fun and exciting like jet skiing.

DAVINA: Somewhere I can eat good food and drink red wine!

And the worst?

CHLOE: The worst place for a guy to take me on a first date would be his parents' house.

DAVINA: The movies, or even better, invite me for movies at his place. Seriously, bro.

What's one thing a bloke can do on a first date that is guaranteed to impress?

CHLOE: Making me laugh is always good! Just keeping my attention and not letting me get too bored! Confidence is good, but not too cocky. I like when they're a bit interested in you... asking questions and listening to the answers!

DAVINA: Make me laugh! If you're funny then you're already ticking boxes!

Have you ever worn something on a first date that made a bloke's jaw drop?

CHLOE: I haven't really been on many dates because I've always been in relationships. But maybe a bikini or something [laughs]. I've heard guys like taking their girl to the beach on a first date and throwing her in so they can see what she really looks like [laughs]. Maybe that's where ZOO is going to take Davina and I on our date!

DAVINA: I haven't had too many first dates. Most guys I date, I already know... or they have already been on my Instagram and seen me half naked in the first place.

Name one thing a guy should never, ever do on a first date.

CHLOE: Never bring up his ex-girlfriends [laughs].

DAVINA: Talk about himself too much. My biggest turn-off is someone who brags about themselves!

If you had to choose between these three first date options, which one would you pick?

1. A buffet at Rooty Hill RSL. 2. A UFC fight. 3. Dinner at his place... cooked by his mum... whom he lives with.

CHLOE: I'll take the UFC fight [laughs]. It actually doesn't sound too bad!

DAVINA: UFC, for sure!!

Are you competitive when it comes to blokes?

CHLOE: No, it's good because we like different types of guys. We've actually never really liked the same guy so it works out perfectly. Davina will say to me, "Isn't that guy so hot?" and I'm like, "Hmm, no!"

DAVINA: Not at all. Chloe will definitely agree with me when I say we have totally different taste in men! It actually works out perfectly!

Do you have a type?

CHLOE: I think I like a bit of a manly man who is rough around the edges.

DAVINA: Gold Coast, surfy, man bun, beard, long hair, guitar-playing, mother-loving, free-spirited, drop-dead gorgeous, nice shoulders, taller than me and a good kisser... IS THAT TOO MUCH TO ASK, AUSTRALIA?

What qualities would the perfect man have?

CHLOE: Like I said, a bit rough around the edges — someone

CHLOE & DAVINA

ZOO

who cares about the way he looks, but not too much! Someone who has a good heart and who's funny. Body-wise, obviously I like him to be a bit buff, bigger than me, big shoulders, nice eyes and cute cheeks [laughs].

DAVINA: He has to be funny and close with his family, not insecure or possessive, and has to be active!

Guys must think they've hit the jackpot when they see the two of you out together. What are some of the funniest pick-up attempts you've had while out?

CHLOE: Pick-up lines never work but at least it makes for good entertainment. I had one the other day:

"If you were a Transformer you would be Optimus Fine!" It made me laugh and it was a good ice-breaker.

DAVINA: Chloe and I have stories to last you days but my most recent pick-up line fail was, "You might want to call a bomb squad... because there's going to be an explosion in your anus!" It was the most disgusting thing anyone has ever said to me... so I bought him a drink [laughs].

What does a big night out involve for you gals?

CHLOE: Usually we go somewhere nice for dinner and have a few wines. We never really plan on going out but then before you know it it's 9am and we're still going! I can handle my alcohol and keep drinking all night, which is good. Shots always make it a fun night! Davina's more of the wild one, she gets a bit crazy! She would disagree and say I'm the devil, though [laughs].

DAVINA: Oh god, where do I start? My best friends, a cute outfit, a few bottles of wine/vodka and some sexy R&B!

What outfit of yours gets the most attention?

CHLOE: I think making it sexy but still classy — you don't want to look too trashy! So I think one or the other... cleavage or legs!

DAVINA: In all honesty, I don't think guys even take notice of my outfit. I have a group of super good-looking girlfriends so I think it's just the amount of legs and boobs that gets their attention [laughs].

HOW TO ENTER

To be in with your chance to date the girls, simply answer the following question in 25 words or less: If you won the date with Davina and Chloe, how would you impress the hell out of them?

Spot the SNIPER!

Can you find him before he puts a bullet through your head?

 Snipers are masters of disguise. They're so good at using camouflage, one of them could be close enough to smell your aftershave and you'd have no idea. Whether they're wearing Ghillie suits — those outfits that make it look like you're impersonating a tree — urban camo or face paint, they're harder to find than a person who actually agrees with Tony Abbott making Prince Philip a knight.

There's a marksman somewhere in every photo on these pages, and he's got you in his crosshairs. Whip out a pen and circle the area you think he's in, then use our Viewa app, hold your phone over the page, and you'll find out where he really is...

BASTØY PRISON

The Norwegian site of a prison colony for young boys where a 1915 riot was stopped by soldiers, Bastøy has been the world's first "human ecological" prison since its 1982 founding. The murderers and rapists live in houses, not cells, in a local, self-sustaining community. In their spare time they can use the indoor climbing wall, play soccer, fish, go to the sauna, or beach, or ski. A chef cooks food like fish balls in sauce with shrimp. Just 16 per cent reoffend — here the figure is about 60 per cent.

NEW BILIBID PRISON

This concert stage with instruments was just one eye-opener found in last year's raid on drug kings' cells in the Philippines jail. Police commandos also found jacuzzis, ice, stripper bars, marble bathrooms and a sex doll. The prison's boss said he didn't know how luxurious the cells were.

JVA PRISON

More budget student hall of residence than prison, the JVA Fuhlsbuettel Prison in Hamburg, Germany, offers a bed, couch and combo shower/toilet (not at the same time, we hope). There are self-serve top-loading washing machines for laundry. Self-serve? That'd ruin so many prison laundry scenes in classic movies.

AL CAPONE'S LUXURY CELL

The first time Scarface was jailed, in 1929 for carrying a concealed weapon, he ended up in Eastern State Penitentiary — and if you ignore the paint peeling from the walls, he was doing better than many outside. He owned a French dresser, Victrola record player, a painting and an oriental rug.

NO BARS ON THE WINDOWS!

HALDEN PRISON

Has someone been shopping at Ikea? Rooms/cells at Norway's Halden have mini-fridges, flat-screen TVs, ensuites and no window bars. Facilities include a sound studio and jogging trails. Shocked James Conway, who worked at New York's brutal Attica, called it "prison utopia".

Medieval UFC!

Modern-day knights get poleaxed in heavy-metal bash-fest

There's a new sport in town and it looks like a cross between MMA and Game of Thrones. The World Medieval Fighting Championship was held in Israel last month, and amazingly, there wasn't a single amputation.

The action takes place in a ring sealed off with metal chains instead of ropes, and the rules are pretty simple: weapons can't be sharpened, bouts are three rounds of three minutes each, and you can't hit people on the neck, the back of the knee, groin, eyes, feet, or the back of the head. Other than that, anything goes.

Punches and kicks get thrown, blokes get hurled to the ground, and there's a points system that rewards disarming someone, strong "shield bashes" and beheadings. Alright, not the last one...

None shall pass!

DEAD MEN'S tattoo exhibition!

100-year-old tats go on display after being cut from corpses

Will your sleeve end up in a glass cabinet in a century's time for school kids to gawk at? Probably not, and if it did, the idea would have been stolen from a current Romanian exhibit of 19th and 20th century tattoos, History of Symbols: The Tattoo in Romania.

Hosted at the Sutu Palace, Bucharest, the collection once belonged to forensic scientist Dr Nicolae Minovici, who headed the country's Institute of Forensic Medicine after WWII. Being in charge of large numbers of bodies meant he was able to chisel off tats that interested him.

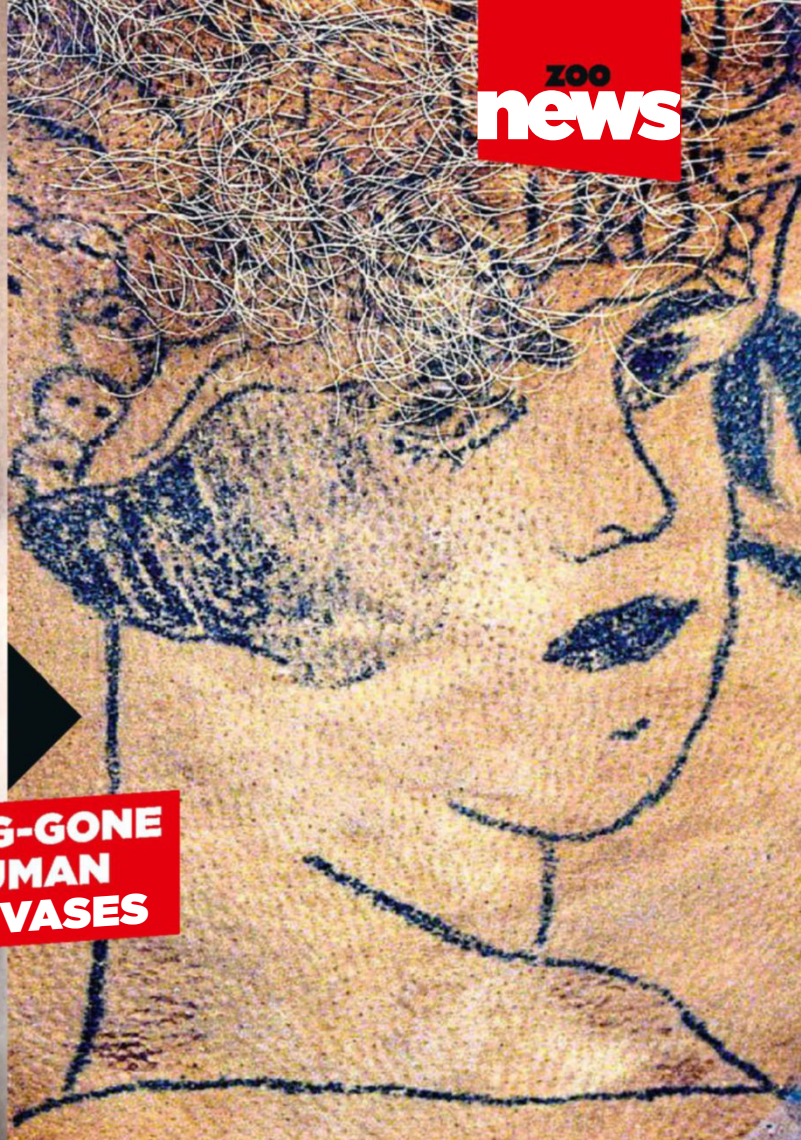

No matter how many times he had his chest waxed, that fugly chick wouldn't come off...

This drinks cabinet is the BOMB!

Get blitzed in style with a piss chest made from a deadly Cold War cluster bomb

 Talk about explosive impact: this one-off piece would look dynamite in anyone's mancave. Pommy brothers Ben and Harry Tucker rescued the 270kg RAF bomb from the tip, spending six months polishing up the 2.2m-high casing and fitting three shelves which rotate around a gold spindle. It's sold for $95k through their firm Fallen Furniture, which offers other plane-related gear. Up next? A speaker made of a jumbo jet exhaust cone. But will it fit into a modded Skyline?

The Bobcat of DEATH!

Police use armoured earthmover to fight crime... and possibly do some landscape gardening

➔ The fact that Australian police are yet to deploy these versatile, Caterpillar-based tools of law enforcement on our streets is an absolute travesty. US firm Ring Power Tactical Solutions custom-build the Rook — a type of “critical incident vehicle”. It’s a pimped-out Caterpillar 287C multi-terrain loader with bolt-on extras such as a hydraulic battering ram that can extend three metres, a grapple claw, vehicle extraction tool and an armoured deployment platform which will turf up to four officers onto the second storey of a building without the need for a ladder. The armour’s rated at NIJ Level IV — as high as it gets. Authorities have used it to hunt a suspected cop killer in Pennsylvania, and no doubt it’ll debut Down Under at Schoolies 2015.

 Nothing to do with donkeys, the latest ride from the tiny Dutch marque has the big boys' attention. Just 14 will be sold, and they'll be snapped up at light speed. New are the huge black front grille and a beefier roll cage; staying are the Lotus-inspired outline, and the Audi RS3's 2.5L turbo five generating 280kW and a 270kmh top. And it only has to push a car that weighs so little you'd be forgiven for thinking the tyres are full of helium.

● Two carrots are out for a drive in the country and they're having the time of their lives. They're going fast around the curves and letting the wind flow through their stalks, just loving it.

All of a sudden, they get in a pretty horrific crash and are rushed to the hospital. One of the carrots is OK, just minor cuts and scrapes, but the other is in pretty bad shape and is rushed into the ICU.

After hours of operating, the doctor comes out to the other carrot in the waiting room and says, "I've got some good news and I've got some bad news. The good news is that your friend is going to live. The bad news is that he's going to be a vegetable for the rest of his life."

THE FITBIT INCIDENT

It was my 35th birthday last week and I'm the first to admit I've stacked on a few kegs from working on cruise ships. There's f**k-all to do on board apart from crush the buffet and then make shame angels on the bed back in your cabin, so I've tubbed up a little. Mum noticed and bought me this thing called a FitBit, which is a pedometer you wear on your wrist. It connects through WiFi to your computer and you can work out how many steps you've taken that day with the simple click of a button. It's pretty slick.

Mum has one of her own and it helped her drop a few sizes, so she gave me a quick rundown of the home page, etc, then she toddled back to her room to float some zeds 'cos she was pretty fingered from a big morning of doing my laundry. An hour later she emerges and asks if I've got it working. I pull up the homepage and it says I've walked 4357 steps. She goes,

"Have you left the house?" and I go, "No"... and after a few seconds of confusion Mum and I both realise at precisely the same moment that this thing has measured my wank. I thought it was a GPS thing, but turns out it measures a stride by the swing of your arm... which should give you all an idea of the kinda length I'm working with, ladies.

If you're a 15-year-old dude and you get caught wanking, it's embarrassing. If you're 35,

How far have you walked today? Whoops — spelling mistake. We meant "wanked"

IF YOU'RE 15 AND YOUR MUM CATCHES YOU WANKING, IT'S EMBARRASSING. IF YOU'RE 35, SINGLE AND STILL LIVING AT HOME, A 3.2KM WANK IS AN ISSUE.

single and still living at home, a 3.2km wank is an issue. Mum's face was kinda like Luke Skywalker when he finds out Darth Vader's his dad: tears were welling up, her lip was quivering and she was backing away on all fours. If she used a blue light on her kitchen table, the whole thing would've shattered. She's trying to get me fit so I can attract a girl and eventually give her grandkids. Meanwhile, back at the ranch, I just murdered a few million of them while she slept in the next room. It's like a million tiny voices cried out in terror and were suddenly silenced... yeah, that's right, two Star Wars references in 20 seconds. WHERE DA PUSSY AT?!

ONLINE DATING

...but were too busy being single to ask

Singles meet thanks to the net – in Antarctica!

Last December a scientist at McMurdo Station in Antarctica logged onto Tinder for shits and giggles. He sure as hell didn't expect to score. But when he expanded the location radius, he came across (not literally) a woman who was doing some research just 45 minutes away by helicopter, which is bummer-all on the world's least populated continent. He swiped right, she did the same a few minutes later, and they're due to hook up before the end of the Antarctic summer. ZOO wishes him the best of luck. He'll need it — this chick sounds frigid.

BIZARRE ONLINE DATING STORIES & FACTS

Done 9:27 AM

About Jake
 **Real ex-girlfriends give Jake a ★★★★★ rating**

Faith says: "Jakes awesome! He's got some serious skills in the kitchen. Not really sure why I left yet, he'd be more attractive with an Australian accent though."

Sarah says: "I'm married, leave me alone..."

Nicole says: "I'm not writing a Tinder review for you, are you serious?"

Danielle says: "we were young and dumb, you were an asshole. Looks like you've changed & like your doing awesome now."

Instagram @imjakechapman / @stayconstant

Jake, 26
 less than a mile away Active just now

Nutter gets his exes to review him on his profile... and it helps him score!

A 26-year-old man from Seattle, known only as Jake, was probably temporarily insane when he asked his ex-girlfriends to review and rate him, and posted the results on his Tinder profile.

Crazy or not, it worked; they gave him an average of four out of five stars and his matches went off the scale. Their remarks included: "Jake's awesome! He's got some serious skills in the kitchen!"; "You were an asshole. Looks like you've changed"; and "I'm married. Leave me alone." One of his exes even broke up with her boyfriend, got on a plane and hooked up with him.

Smiling is overrated

Women smile in their profile pics far more often than men, but that isn't always their best bet; research shows they get more hits if they flirt into the camera, making eye contact. On the other hand, they get the worst results if they flirt away from the camera.

Women do more detective work

According to Match.com, chicks are far more suss of blokes than we are of them; 48 per cent of women research a potential partner online before meeting them, while only 38 per cent of dudes do the same.

This tastes like roofies. Shit! Wrong drink!

It's not all hits and hook-ups

A study by Michigan State University found that the number of couples who met online, then separate or divorce, is way higher than the number of non-online couples who break it off. And Pew Research, a US-based think tank, found that 33 per cent of all people who use online dating have never actually got a date out of it.

Gland canyons get better with age

It sounds obvious, but cleavage shots work the best for women; they get 49 per cent more hits per month compared to non-cleavage pics. What's unexpected is the fact it works even better for women as they age. Well, up to a point. It's probably not a great strategy for ladies who grew up before TV.

STRANGEST DATING SITES

Gluten haters, rejoice!

If you're one of the ever-growing band of health-conscious people who refuse to eat anything with gluten in it because someone told you it'll help you lose weight, firstly, piss off. Secondly, visit <http://www.glutenfreesingles.com> so you can meet singles who share your obsession. You can get together and talk about... we dunno, how much you miss bread and stuff.

Braaaaaains... and casual sex

Are you a zombie? Do you find that people run screaming from you or shoot you on sight, making it hard to hook up with hotties? Then visit <http://zombiepassions.com> and date other members of the undead, plus living, breathing fans of all things zombie. Pro tip: eating brains is the zombie equivalent of third base, so don't expect it to happen on the first date.

Calling all 'tache owners

Crumb catcher, bro-merang, mouth mirken — call it what you will, the moustache is still very popular with some women. And you can probably find all 13 of them on www.stachepassions.com, which calls itself a site for "singles with a passion for the Stache". It's unclear if that includes blokes who love a lady with a flavour saver Merv Hughes would be proud of, though.

For lovers of seamen

That's not a spelling mistake, ladies. Visitors to www.seacaptaindate.com will find a huge range of, well, sea captains. From what ZOO can tell, they range from genuine ships' captains to dudes who like to play dress-ups and pretend they're Captain Stubing from The Love Boat. You can sign up for casual roots, pen pals, or finding a "sailing partner". We guess that last one means anal sex.

Every woman's dream

It's common knowledge that chicks love nothing more than a man who spends all his spare time playing golf. And that's why www.dateagolfer.com will probably have more members than Facebook by the time you've finished reading this sentence. It makes sense: men who are on the links a lot are usually rich, and they always wash their balls.

Nappy wedding anniversary!

Adult nappies aren't just for old folks who can't keep it in anymore — many grown men and women have wardrobes full of them, and they've got their own site, <http://diapermates.com>. It's a godsend for fans of getting around in a pair of Huggies, 'cos telling strangers you like wearing nappies is about as embarrassing as revealing you barrack for Collingwood.

HOW TO AVOID FAKE DATING PROFILES

➔ Most fake accounts will only chat with you if you start chatting first.

➔ Once they start chatting, many have similar scripts: "hey...have we spoken before? 22...female here" was a popular one found by online security company Symantec.

➔ If you get chatting to a fake profile, it'll ask you to video-chat, and send you a link to a webcam site. If you accept, you'll be asked for your credit card details, and the "girl" you've met will tell you they're only needed to verify your age. Which is bullshit.

➔ If you suspect a profile's a fake, check to see if you have any interests in common. If it is a fake, it's almost guaranteed there won't be any common interests, because it's linked back to a fake Facebook profile that the user didn't bother to populate with any interests at all.

➔ It's easier to fake a profile on some sites than it is on others. Tinder's more difficult because a fake Facebook profile is required; OK Cupid is far simpler, as it's not linked to Facey.

➔ Answers from bots come incredibly fast. They don't have to type them out like humans. So if you're getting replies about 0.023 seconds after you're done typing, beware.

➔ If you're on Tinder and the "chick" you're talking to has a topless/nude/extremely sexy profile pic, she's probably fake. Facebook doesn't allow that sort of thing.

MANHUNTERS VS AUSSIES

Put the Speedos away and get to grips with the shark attacks that gave Australia nightmares

SYDNEY'S INSANE MASS SHARK HUNT

On February 5, 1955, Bruno Rautenberg and a mate had spent the day cleaning out a rock swimming pool in Sydney's Middle Harbour. Wanting to wash off, he ignored his friend's warnings about sharks and swam out into water that was about four metres deep. "I saw the shark grab him by the leg...

and was thrashing madly, trying to drag him into deep water," said his friend, who managed to scare the fish off with a section of pipe. But it was too late for Bruno, whose legs had been bitten off.

It was the second fatal shark attack in the area in the space of three weeks. Sydney was gripped by panic and a £1000 reward posted for the killer creature thought responsible for both deaths.

Like something out of Jaws, a mass hunt ensued around Middle Harbour, with hundreds of people joining in to tip more than a tonne of bait into the waters. But the biggest shark they caught was a measly two-footer.

RECORD-BREAKING SAILING TRIP TURNS BLOODY

Dr Ernest Alexander Joske was an ANZAC who'd deferred medical studies to sign up for WWI, then established a well-liked practice in Adelaide.

His other passion was the sea, and in October 1950 he set out to be the first Aussie to sail solo around the world. "I just want to get away from telephones and people," he told reporters. "I couldn't think of a better place than the middle of the Pacific."

But he never got that far. On September 2, 1951, his yacht Christine was found adrift 40km down Queensland's Fitzroy River, with Joske caught in the rigging, stomach ripped open and one leg torn off.

Australia was spellbound by the mystery for weeks. An inquest later determined the good doctor had sustained a serious injury after running aground and then falling into the water, where he was attacked by a shark, before clambering back aboard his yacht and succumbing to his terrible wounds.

THE DEATH OF OZ'S ROBINSON CRUSOE

In 1893, Deliverance Island in the Torres Strait became home to Harry Envoldt, Australia's real-life version of Robinson Crusoe. Originally a Danish sailor whose vessel was shipwrecked, he shunned society and lived alone on his tropical paradise. Envoldt built a thatched hut, raised fowl, grew veggies and used a cage to trap fish and turtles. He didn't leave his island home for 35 years. His last diary entry was dated

ACTRESS'S TRAGIC FINALE

Marcia Hathaway was a well-known Sydney stage, radio and movie actress. On the Australia Day weekend in 1963, she and her fiancé joined a group of friends for a boating trip to Sugarloaf Bay. That very day, The Sydney Morning Herald carried a front-page headline that warned: "Australia Day holiday surfers warned of sharks".

Sadly, after just five minutes in water less than a metre deep, the 32-year-old beauty was attacked by a medium-sized shark that savaged her calf and thigh. Her brave fiancé fought the animal off and stopped it from dragging her into the depths. "The water was stained with blood and I never thought I would get her away from it," he said later. "I think at one stage I had my foot in its mouth."

Friends on the boat used sheets to make tourniquets while he swam for help. Hathaway was carried to an ambulance, but the clutch burned out.

A crowd of 30 gathered and desperately tried to push it up the hill. By the time a second ambulance arrived, Hathaway had lost her 20-minute battle for survival. She was the last person to die of a shark attack in Sydney Harbour.

THE SHARK ARM MURDER CASE

In April 1935 a fisherman hooked a small shark off Sydney's Coogee Beach, only for a 3.5-metre tiger to swallow up his catch as he was reeling it in. Happy with his two-for-one bonus, the angler handed it over for display at the Coogee Aquarium Baths.

There, on Anzac Day, visitors were sickened when the shark spewed up a human arm, in good enough nick for the cops to fingerprint it.

Police identified it as having been cut from Jim Smith, a small-time Sydney crook who had gone missing on April 7. The police suspected he'd been murdered by underworld associates, Reginald Holmes and Patrick Brady.

After being questioned, Holmes shot himself in the head. Somehow he survived, jumped on a speedboat and led the cops on a merry chase around Sydney Harbour. When he was nabbed, Holmes claimed Brady had murdered Smith and then come to his house waving the severed arm, threatening Holmes's life if he didn't give him £500.

The case against Brady fell apart after Holmes was found shot to death in The Rocks in what looked like suicide. Brady was acquitted and went to his grave protesting his innocence. As for the shark? Poor bastard was killed and gutted a few days after coughing up the evidence.

HORROR IN WOY WOY

In December 1934, a 14-year-old lad named Roy Inman was enjoying a summer holiday in tranquil Horsfield's Bay a mile from the NSW Central Coast town of Woy Woy. Watched by older sister Kathleen, Roy and his younger sister Joyce were diving off a small jetty by their cottage. As Joyce trod water, she screamed in terror and her leg was grazed by the fin of the black shark that zeroed in on her brother and took him in a swirl of foam. Kathleen raced to help with an oar. "She had almost reached the end of the jetty when her brother's head appeared, but the shark returned to the attack, and the boy went down in water tinged with blood," The Courier Mail reported. "The girl frantically searched the locality, pushing the oar down into the water in the hope that the shark would release its victim, but in vain." Local fishermen had seen sharks in the bay and warned against swimming.

WILL I DIE FROM A SHARK ATTACK?

Not unless you're very bloody unlucky. Estimates vary but maffs boffins put the lifetime chances of dying from a shark attack at one in 3.7 million. In 2004, it was one in 913,200,766. Put another way, you've got far more chance of dying from a lightning strike (one in 79,746) or by drowning (one in 1134) than ending up as shark poo. In 2013, there were just 10 deaths from a worldwide total of 72 unprovoked shark attacks. Worldwide, between 1580 and 2013, there were 2666 confirmed shark attack fatalities. That's three fewer people than have been killed by exposure to 1980s John Farnham music videos.

ARE AUSSIE SHARK ATTACKS ON THE RISE?

Again: no. In 2013 there were 10 shark attacks, the lowest since 2008. The mark of two fatalities that year was in line with the 1.4 yearly average from 2003 to 2012. As a comparison, in 2013 Australia's national road toll was 1193. But in 1934 there were seven fatal shark attacks — and Australia's population was 6.7m, compared to today's 23.7m. Of 976 shark attacks since 1791, 232 were fatal.

MOLLYMOOK MONSTER

Sam Smith, 17, was spearfishing off Bannister Head in Mollymook in January when he was attacked by a small shark, thought to be a bronze whaler. Smith's GoPro video shows the fish biting into one hand as he tries to fend it off with the other. The kid had surgery for severe gashes, tendon and bone damage. But the attack left him with a newfound respect for sharks. "It's built to kill fish and stuff, seals and stuff, so it could have ripped my whole arm off if it wanted to," he said.

TINNY TERROR

In what's already a strong contender for 2015's funniest video, Newcastle mates Tim Watson and Allan de Sylva recorded the shit-scary moment in January that their little tinny was menaced and nudged by a five-metre great white. Check their awesome video commentary: "Man that is a f**kin' five-metre shark... he's looking at me, ay?... Holy f**king shit... Get f**ked... He's by the front of the boat... Awwwww... Dude, f**k.... Dude... Get f**ked, c**t... Aw, f**k! Can we go?"

FREO FREAKOUT

In November, David Lock was off Fremantle fishing for salmon with his dad when a giant great white started circling their boat. He was recording when the beast rammed the vessel and tore a chunk out of the hull. It shook the 7m boat so hard he dropped the phone. "He has just launched and his head has landed on top of the side of the boat," Lock told the West Australian. "I have jumped back, he would have had me otherwise. He touched my leg, it was that close. It was front-on and mouth-first."

THEY NEEDED A BIGGER BOAT

On a Saturday morning in June 1923, four miners went fishing in their 4m skiff off the Belambi River near Wollongong, NSW.

A shoal of sharks hit their flimsy vessel, a dorsal fin tearing a hole in its hull and they were left clinging to the upturned boat. Only two could swim. Joseph Rigby and John Butler shook hands and tried to make it the few kays back to shore.

Rigby had only gone a short way when he gave a cry and went under, presumably attacked by a shark. Butler got tangled in fishing lines and returned to the upturned boat. George Clarke became exhausted and drowned. While Butler tried to fix the hole in the boat, his last mate Garnett Powell disappeared. The sole survivor managed to right the boat and flag down a passing coal ship.

THE REAL-LIFE SHARKNADO

We can't blame sharks for attacking people in their domain. That's the argument quite rightly raised against culling in the wake of a fatal attack. But spare a thought for poor South Australian bloke Leslie Oswald Harris, who died in a freak event that was like something out of Sharknado: The Great Australian Bite.

On September 5, 1971, the 51-year-old was fishing when a small shark leaped out of the water and into his boat, biting him on the shoulder in the process. Rescuers got Harris to shore, but, while his wound wasn't life-threatening in itself, blood loss and shock caused him to have a heart attack, and he died six hours later.

It's not a tuna!

“GOODBYE, MATES, THIS IS IT!”

In March 1977, three blokes were night fishing when their boat was unwittingly cut in half and sunk by a Japanese freighter. Verdon Harrison, 32, John Hays, 45, and Victor Beaver, 74, survived the accident and clung to an ice box for almost two days, their terror increasing as they floated farther from Moreton Island, Qld.

Then the sharks arrived. Beaver was attacked first, calling, “Goodbye, mates, this is it!” as he was dragged away. Hays had an arm ripped off but bravely fought the shark and got back onto the icebox. “I gouged his eye out — he won’t be back,” the plucky bastard said — right before a second attack saw him taken into the deep. Harrison climbed onto the ice box, with a big shark trying to get him. Luckily, rescuers spotted him. “How I escaped, I’ll never know,” he said. “It was a nightmare.”

THE EMPIRE BUILT ON A SHARK ATTACK

One of 20th Century Australia’s most successful businessmen, Sir Frank Beaurepaire, built his tyre empire on the reward he received for his bravery in rescuing a shark attack victim. Born in 1891, Beaurepaire was a champion swimmer, winning three silver and bronze Olympic medals. On February 4, 1922, a crowd of 6000 gathered to enjoy a day at Coogee.

Among them was Milton Coughlan, 19. “The swimmer was observed standing about waist deep on the edge of the channel which runs beyond the reef and then a huge something flashed in the sun, clear of the water, and the horrified crowd next saw for some minutes a shark and the swimmer thrashing around in a welter of blood-stained water and scarlet-flecked foam,” reported The Referee.

Coughlan was savaged before he could make it to shore, the shark biting off one arm at the elbow and mangling the other terribly.

A “well-known swimmer” named Frank Chalmers raced to his rescue, and was soon helped by that “champion of champions” Beaurepaire, who beat the water to scare off a swarm of finned monsters attracted by all the blood.

Sadly, Coughlan died soon after they got him to shore.

AMPHIBIOUS JACK BECOMES SHARKBAIT

In 1820s Tasmania, a chap known only — and ironically — to history as “Amphibious Jack” apparently thought he was pretty hot shit. Hanging out in Sweetwater Point in Pittwater, he decided to swim a channel with oysters he’d gathered and swap gossip with limeburners who worked in the area. They warned Jack that the waters were thick with sharks but he laughed, plunged into the river and was promptly attacked by two monsters of the deep. One clamped onto his thigh, the other made off with his oyster sack. When he was dragged into the shallows by the shark, bystanders tried to rescue him by beating his attacker around the head. But it was too late to save Jack. As an 1863 book recorded: “The main arteries of the leg of the poor sufferer were so effectually severed that the scarlet tide of life had finally ebbed.”

AUSSIE SHARK ATTACK SURVIVORS

PAUL DE GELDER

In 2009, the Australian Navy clearance diver was taking part in an anti-terrorism exercise in Sydney Harbour when he felt an "almighty whack" on his leg, which, remarkably, didn't hurt. A second later he looked down to see an enormous bull shark had his hand and leg in its mouth. With the beast trying to drag him under, De Gelder thought quickly and punched its nose. It released him and he popped to the surface — only to see his hand was gone. Keeping his stump above his heart and out of the water so his blood wouldn't attract the shark again, cool-headed De Gelder swam to a Navy boat, which rushed him to hospital. There, surgeons amputated his leg. Six years later, he's a motivational speaker and shark conservationist.

RODNEY FOX

The South Australian is the world's miracle attack survivor. In December 1963 the champion spearfisher was almost killed by a great white.

"It was swimming along with me in its mouth," he says. "I gouged around its head and it sort of let me go. It stopped and I sort of fell out of its mouth and instinctively thrust my hand at it to push it away.

"But it went in its mouth, over its sharp teeth. Before it could close its mouth and bite my arm off I ripped it out. I thought, what else can I do?"

"I grabbed the shark around the belly ... thinking if I held on it can't bite me." Fox was pulled from the water by a boat crew alive but ripped apart — his abdomen was fully opened up, all the ribs on the left side of his body were broken, his spleen was exposed, his scapula was punctured, his right hand was sliced up and he lost so much blood his veins were about to collapse.

Miraculously, a main artery was exposed but intact, otherwise he would've bled to death in seconds. Rushed ashore and then to hospital, Fox underwent four hours of surgery that required 462 stitches. The attack led to his lifelong fascination with great whites and attempts to understand and conserve the species.

In 1965, he built the world's first shark cage and he has been involved in over 70 films and docs, including Jaws in 1975.

It looked ridiculous

That's not the word we'd use. Any others?

There's a Jacuzzi in our garden, which I use in the nude, so the neighbours must have seen me a few times. I also tend to get dressed in my living room, and there's a double-decker bus that comes right past my front window. I've been caught naked by the people on the top deck a couple of times, too.

That must shock them on their way to work...

They do a double-take to see if it's really happening — and it is! I'm used to it, though; I'm getting a bit famous locally for it. Some people probably only get the bus to have a peek. They could be on their way to work on a rainy Monday morning, see me naked and cheer up. The bottom deck is always empty — everyone's up top to see me!

Maybe you could consider becoming a nudist.

I'd love to go to a nude beach. Not somewhere like [Pom seaside town] Skegness, though: I'd be scared of seeing OAPs with saggy bums! I'd go to Brazil where they're a bit more well-toned. I'd rather have a pool party, though...

We'd start off in a party bus and then end up at the pool, where everyone will be naked, of course. It'd be hot and the BBQ would have to be fired up, too. We'd need a dedicated chef, but I'd allow them to wear an apron. I'd have to let them off with some clothing if they're near the flames!

It'd have to include Scarlett Johansson, because she's got such great boobs, and Jennifer Lopez. We'd have to make sure J-Lo is totally, totally naked. I want to see everything! She's got a great body and a nice, toned bum.

We sense a shoot theme developing here...

Definitely! Maybe we could take that idea to Dragons' Den to pay for it? Who's going to say no to seeing Scarlett Johansson, J-Lo and me naked and covered in oil? I'd happily be the photographer, too, if that helps keep the cost down...

That sort of business skill could see you absolutely kill it on The Apprentice...

I think I could win that. I would turn up to Lord Sugar's boardroom wearing nothing but a long coat and they'd hire me instantly, wouldn't they? Manipulation and a naked body is all you need. Let's just hope they don't have to censor out the nudity!

ZOO'S 2015 CRICKET WORLD CUP SPECIAL

electric!”

Aussie Test skipper and run-scoring machine
Steve Smith previews the World Cup for ZOO

G'day, Steve. Do you have a favourite World Cup moment as a cricket fan?

My favourite moment was in the World Cup final against Pakistan in 1999 when Glenn McGrath dismissed Wajahatullah Wasti and Mark Waugh took an absolute screamer at second slip. When I think back on World Cups, that one sticks in my memory.

Does Australian coach Boof Lehmann ever mention he hit the winning runs in that final?

He brings it up here and there. He's not one to shy away from a story like that.

What's the strategy in a long tournament like the World Cup?

Make sure you play your best cricket at the end of the tournament — that's how tournament play works best. I've learnt a lot about that from playing in some big tournaments myself — when the Sydney Sixers won the Champions League a couple of years ago, and NSW have done that as well. I'm sure with the team and the squad we've got, if we're doing that, we'll be right there at the end of the tournament.

Will it be kinda sweet not being captain for a bit while playing in the World Cup?

I'm happy with however it all works out. Hopefully Michael [Clarke] gets himself right for the World Cup and is right to go but if not, [one-day captain] George [Bailey] has done a wonderful job captaining the team, as well. Really, I'm just looking forward to playing a World Cup at home in front of our fans. It's going to be electric and outstanding.

There's always an upset from one of the lesser teams in this tournament — who do you reckon is good for it this World Cup?

I'm just hoping it won't be against us. Bangladesh has been playing some pretty good cricket, so you might see them knock off one of the top teams.

Australia play Afghanistan in Perth during the pool matches — any dangers there?

I reckon it's great for Afghanistan to be playing in a World Cup and we won't be taking any team lightly. We're there to win every game and play the same aggressive cricket we always play.

Which of your teammates will provide comic relief during the long tournament?

The class clown of the group is James Faulkner — he throws a bit of banter around and is not the sharpest tool in the shed, so he'll provide some comedy.

Which teammate's musical taste would you most like to avoid during the hotel stays?

Aaron Finch. He

“JAMES FAULKNER ISN'T THE SHARPEST TOOL IN THE SHED, SO HE'LL PROVIDE SOME COMEDY”

plays some weird stuff in the change rooms that I've never even heard of.

People keep saying the 50-over format is on borrowed time — what's your view?

I enjoy playing it, I love the format. It takes a lot of skill to play, particularly as a batsman. It's got a little easier as a batsman now that there's only four out — there's always a gap somewhere to get a boundary. It's tough on the bowlers, but the one-day game is certainly alive and well and we're certainly looking forward to a World Cup that strengthens this format of the game.

Has T20 affected how cricket's played?

I think it has. Players have a whole array of shots, and with the four fielders out, as I said, it gives you the option to hit a boundary, and a lot of players are able to do that 360 degrees on the ground now. That's great for the game.

Do all the pats on the back you've been getting lately mask the fact you've been working your arse off to get better?

I certainly do put a lot of hard work into my job and I've been lucky enough to have some good results lately. I'm happy where everything's at but as long as I'm playing well for Australia and winning games for Australia, that's the most important thing to me.

AUSTRALIA VS SOUTH AFRICA SEMI FINAL, EDGBASTON, 1999

➔ Having just beaten South Africa in the Super Six stage (see page 55), Australia found themselves in another dogfight in this epic semi final. After losing the toss we struggled against speedster Allan Donald and seamer Shaun Pollock to make 213. Wickets fell steadily through the South African innings, with wicketkeeper Mark Boucher, Pollock and big-hitting bowler Lance Klusener bringing the Saffers within striking distance of Australia's total. But it's the last over for which this game will always be remembered: South Africa needed nine to win. Klusener clubbed the first two from Damien Fleming for four. South Africa was now level, and needed just one. A tie would see Australia go through because of their Super Six win. Klusener mishit the next one. He also mishit the fourth ball but decided to run anyway. Sprinted, in fact. Donald was watching the ball, not Klusener, and didn't react. By the time he did, Fleming had received the ball from Mark Waugh at mid-off and rolled it down the pitch to Adam Gilchrist, who whipped off the bails and ran Donald out. Australia was through to the final. Pandemonium!

PAKISTAN WIN IN MELBOURNE, 1992

➔ Led by the charismatic Imran Khan, who was retiring after the tournament, Pakistan surged to a historic win when Australia hosted the World Cup in 1992. They looked anything but contenders early in the tournament, winning just one of five matches, and gaining a vital point when their match against England was rained out. A famous mid-tournament rev-up by Khan had the desired effect. The Pakis beat Australia, Sri Lanka and New Zealand twice, including in the semi final, to meet England in the final. Led by an inspirational innings from Imran, Pakistan stunned the cricket world by claiming the Cup and sending Melbourne's Pakistani expats just slightly crazy.

PUNTER'S CENTURY, 2003

➔ At the height of his ball-striking powers, Ricky Ponting owned the 2003 World Cup Final against India, smashing 140 off 121 in a match-winning performance that saw Australia defend its title. Supported by Damien Martyn after Hayden and Gilchrist had got Australia off to a solid start, Ponting actually took 74 balls to make 50, including just one four. But then he went nuts, taking only 29 balls to go from 50 to 100. It started with two consecutive sixes over midwicket off his old nemesis Harbhajan and continued until Australia had reached the highest total in a World Cup final: 359. It proved too much for India's batsman and Australia claimed the title without losing a match in the tournament.

WON IN THE DARK!

CHAOTIC END IN BARBADOS, 2007

➔ Australia's moment of supreme triumph — becoming the first side to win three successive World Cup finals — was almost overshadowed by a totally bizarre end to the 2007 World Cup final between us and the Sri Lankans in the Caribbean. Sri Lanka were seven for 206 chasing Australia's 50-over total of 281 for four with three overs left when they accepted bad light after 6pm and everyone walked off. As the sky darkened, most people assumed the match was over and the presentation stage was even set up on the field. Umpires Aleem Dar and Steve Bucknor had other ideas, dragging both teams back onto the field to finish the match in darkness. Didn't matter — we still won.

A large action shot of Shoaib Akhtar in his green and yellow Pakistan cricket uniform, captured mid-bowling stride with his right arm raised high and his left leg bent. The background is a blurred crowd of spectators.

BOWLED 161.3KMH!

SHOAIB AKHTAR CLOCKS 100 MILES AN HOUR AGAINST ENGLAND, 2003

➔ The competition between Pakistan's Shoaib Akhtar and Brett Lee to bowl faster and faster — and break the 100mph delivery mark — was at its peak at this Cup. Akhtar seemed more interested in watching the speed gun register higher and higher numbers than actually taking wickets. In the pool match against England he waited until the fourth over and then, bowling with ever-increasing pace against Nick Knight, he clocked 98.4mph for the second ball of the over, 99.1mph on the fifth and then on the last ball, drew a massive cheer from the crowd as the big screen showed the delivery to be 100.2mph, or 161.3kmh. "When I'd done 158kph then I said, this is the time, I just cross the barrier and finish it for the rest of my life," Akhtar said of his history-making effort.

AUSTRALIA VS ENGLAND, 1987

➔ Australia struggled badly during the mid-1980s. The divisions of World Series Cricket plus the retirements of Dennis Lillee, Rod Marsh and Greg Chappell left Allan Border in charge of an inexperienced outfit. The turning point came at the 1987 World Cup in India and Pakistan. Australia topped their group to go through and meet Pakistan in the semi final, beating them comfortably to take on England in the decider.

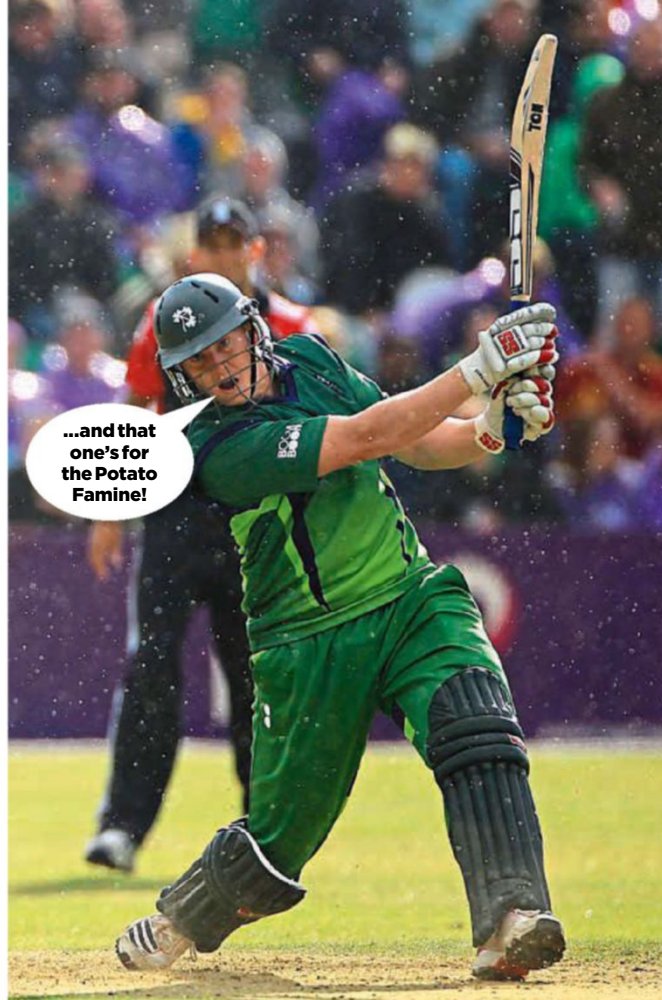

Thanks to David Boon and Mike Veletta, Australia set England a competitive 253 to chase. In reply, the Poms were cruising, with Bill Athey (above) and skipper Mike Gatting building a stand. Then Gatting played one of the most ridiculous shots of his career, a reverse sweep to the gentle left-arm spin of Border. Caught and out! And so were England, as they capitulated to fall seven runs short. Australia was back, baby!

THE FIRST WORLD CUP, 1975

➔ Only 18 one-day internationals had been played when the first World Cup was staged in 1975, and some nations played the matches as if they were shortened Test matches — India actually played for a draw in their first game of the tournament. The final came down to a battle at Lord's between Australia and the West Indies, which eventually finished in near darkness. "Supercat" Clive Lloyd was the star, belting 12 fours and two sixes for 102 in a West Indian total of 291 off 60 Overs. The Aussie top order botched their running, continually taking singles on Viv Richards' arm, and at nine for 233 looked like toast. But pace pair DK Lillee and Jeff Thomson inched Australia to within 18 of victory before yet another run-out, at 8.41pm, delivered the Windies the inaugural Cup.

...and that one's for the Potato Famine!

IRELAND BEAT ENGLAND, 2011

➔ It's always fun to watch England getting beaten at anything, of course, but particularly when they're taken down by opponents who are, in effect, amateurs. One such occasion was during the 2011 Cup in Bangladesh. Ireland — a part-time cricketing nation at best — had announced themselves by beating Pakistan in the group stage during the 2007 Cup. But beating England here was sooooo much sweeter, particularly after the Poms posted a mammoth 327 off their 50 overs. At four for 106, Ireland looked like cows readied for the slaughter... until Kevin O'Brien (above), his hair dyed pink for charity, unleashed hell, scoring 113 in 63 balls with 13 fours and six sixes. He was out in the second last over of the match but Ireland was home in an epic boilover.

Damn! I thought it was a doughnut!

TUBS LEVEROCK'S AWESOME CATCH, 2007

➔ It was, if we're honest, a nothing match in the Cup's early stages, between Bermuda and India. But it makes the list because of one spectacular moment: when roly-poly, 127kg left-arm bowler Dwayne Leverock threw his bulk to the right to take an amazing diving slips catch to remove an Indian batsman. His effort reduced the bowler Malachi Jones — taking his first World Cup wicket — to tears, but in the end there were tears of pain as the Bermudans were thumped by 257 runs.

WAUGH OF THE WORDS

GIBBS DROPS THE WORLD CUP, 1999

➔ Steve Waugh reckons he never said it, which spoils one of cricket's great sledging stories — that during the SuperSix stage of the 1999 World Cup, with Australia needing to beat South Africa to make the semis, the Aussie skipper said to batsman Herschelle Gibbs, "You've just dropped the World Cup!" when Gibbs first took then somehow fumbled a catch offered by Waugh. Australia was chasing 271, thanks to a century from Gibbs, and was three for 48 when Waugh came in to bat. On 56 he miscued a shot to Gibbs, who famously fumbled the catch. Waugh reckons he said something like, "You've just lost the match for your team." Either way, he went on to make 120 off 110 and Australia got home with two balls to spare.

THE INTERVIEW

[MA15+]

8<sup>110</sup>

THE GIST: TV host Dave Skylark (James Franco) and his producer Aaron (Seth Rogen) are convinced by the CIA to fly to North Korea to interview Kim Jong-un when it's discovered the chubby leader is a fan of the show — but there's one catch: they must assassinate the crazy dictator while they're there. ZOO SAYS: After the Sony hacking scandal and terrorist threats delayed its release, one of the most controversial movies of all time is finally hitting Aussie cinemas. A North Korean agent could kill you as you watch it, but Rogen and Franco's stoner banter is worth the risk.

I want you to push my stool in

FIFTY SHADES OF GREY

[CTC]

2<sup>110</sup>

THE GIST: A 21-year-old student named Ana (Dakota Johnson), who is a naive virgin, meets mysterious moneybags Christian Grey (Jamie Dornan) when she interviews him for an article. Grey's into some seriously kinky shit and grooms Ana by lavishing her with expensive gifts, chopper rides and fancy dinners so he can pop her cherry and dominate her BDSM-style. ZOO SAYS: Your missus will be gagging for you to take her to this on Valentine's Day, which is ironic, 'cos watching a chick get violated while wearing a gag goes against every feminist ideal. But apparently it's romantic when he's hot and rich...

I'm listening to The Wiggles

ZOO PLAYS

BATTLEFIELD: HARDLINE

It took about five seconds of game time to realise the upcoming first-person shooter sequel was gonna be badass. Why? 'Cos it's freakishly different, yet true to the roots of the series. Boldly scrapping the modern military theme, it's now gone gangsta with GTA V-style heists, incorporating team-based cops vs robbers multiplayer matches. As coppers, we jumped into police cars and chased down the crooks in their getaway sedans and trucks. It's tough to bring them down during a high-speed car chase, but the cars had sharp brakes and made tight turns easily. With colleagues in the passenger seats, they can lean out the window and fire weapons, turning the street into a Michael Bay movie. We struggled with flying the chopper, but the shooting was hectic, and you get more toys to play with, like trip mines and zip lines.

SHOOTER

EVOLVE
XB1, PS4, PC

9/10

THE GIST: A five-player, multiplayer shooter where four hunters face an alien monster. Each hunter has their own unique abilities and weaponry, giving them set roles on the battlefield. Meanwhile the player controlling the beast tries to escape and evolve into an unstoppable horror. There's a variety of monsters to choose from, while classes range from Assault, Support and Traps to Medic.

ZOO SAYS: Four-versus-one sounds simpler than ordering a round of beers for mates, but it's actually more complicated than buying a round for chicks on a hen's night. The hunting team needs a plan within a plan in order to win, because your prey is absolutely terrifying. It can be a snore waiting for five active players to join the match, but the game looks and sounds ball-droppingly good!

MYSTERY/
THRILLER

BEFORE I GO TO SLEEP

[MA15+]

THE GIST: Every morning, Christine (Nicole Kidman) wakes up with no memory of her life. Her husband Ben (Colin Firth) has to explain to her that she has amnesia as a result of an accident 10 years ago. After encouragement from her doctor (Mark Strong), she begins to keep a secret video diary as a reminder for her when she wakes up. Christine slowly starts to realise not everyone is who they seem as she delves into the mysterious circumstances surrounding her "accident". ZOO SAYS: Alarm bells ring when a film starring Kidman and Firth goes straight to DVD. But it's not that bad and should keep you guessing.

Shit... they want me to give a urine sample

THE JUDGE

[M]

THE GIST: A cocky big-city lawyer (Robert Downey Jr) goes back to his small home town for his mum's funeral. While there, he butts heads with his stubborn dad (Robert Duvall), who is the local judge. He leaves in a huff, but has to return to defend his old man against a ruthless prosecutor (Billy Bob Thornton), who is trying to push for murder charges relating to a hit and run. ZOO SAYS: It tries to go for the heartstrings with the dying dad and ex-girlfriend subplot, but Downey Jr is too hard to sympathise with due to his smug attitude and shit dyed hair.

HEAVY ROCK

DANKO JONES

DINE ALONE

8/10

SOUNDS LIKE: Fronted by riffmeister Danko Jones, 18 years on and this Canadian trio continue to pump out solid rock albums like a western Sydney teenager pumps out kids. Every one of the 11 tracks features riffs chunkier than Magda Szubanski's canklles, plus Jones's Hetfield-esque vocal delivery.

ZOO SAYS: If the amount of slow electronic shit in this year's Hottest 100 made you want to buy a one-way bus fare to The Gap, do yourself a favour and buy this no-bullshit rock album. It's more meat and potatoes than Lois Einhorn's underpants.

EVIL FAST FOOD

KFC has launched the logical next step to the Double Down, joining a growing hall of shame

1 KFC's Double Down burger — replacing the buns with fried chicken — was cult. KFC's gone further in the Philippines with the Double Down Dog, stuffing a snag between cheese-stuffed chicken breasts (above)

2 In South Korea, KFC once had the Double Down King: fried chicken for buns but with a burger

patty, bacon and cheese (free stent not included)

3 It gets worse. The Krispy Kreme Triple Cheeseburger made a sole appearance at the San Diego County Fair last year. Presumably everyone had heart attacks and died. US fairs have also featured deep-fried Coke, bubblegum, and peanut butter banana cheeseburgers.

4 Burger King and Macca's went head to head last year with their black cheeseburgers in Japan: BK's Kuro burger had black buns, cheese coloured with bamboo charcoal and squid ink ketchup; Macca's Ikasumi had squid-ink buns

5 This isn't the first black burger from BK: in 2012, they released the Dark Vader bun in France. They also released the Jedi burger, which featured cubes of mozzarella cheese, because Obi-Wan Kenobi clearly loved his cheese

6 ZOO also has to mention Domino's Specialty Chicken (pizza topping on a fried chicken base), the Wendy's Pulled Pork Cheeseburger and the Taco Bell Waffle Taco, a massive US brekkie hit

+ Every member of US Congress gets a copy of porn mag Hustler every month. Publisher Larry Flynt sends them, and there's nothing the politicians can do to stop it

+ More than 39 per cent of workers aged 18-24 would quit their job if Facebook was banned at their work

+ The need for a male heir is so strong in China that 97.5 per cent of female fetuses are aborted

+ IKEA builds $1000 flat-pack refugee shelters, then sells them to the United Nations

+ There's a comedy club in Spain that charges patrons every time they laugh. Each giggle costs the user the equivalent of 42 cents, with a cap of around $33

+ The red juice that collects in red-meat packages isn't blood — it's a mixture of water and a protein called myoglobin. Most of the blood is removed during processing

+ Ransom payments to kidnappers are tax-deductable in the US

There are another 21,000 pieces down the back of the couch

It took Danish teen Amanda Funch 450 hours over two and a half months to complete this 33,600-piece jigsaw puzzle
